Boston, Mass., May 30 .- Decoration Day was fittingly observed here, but the Red Sox did the decorating, confining said decorations to the scoreboard Morning game figures, Boston, 4; Washington, 3. In the afternoon it was Red Sox, 8; Griffmen, 2.

The double-defeat dose still rankles in the chests of Griff's chosen band The players tonight are full of alibi's, and every sentence starts with an "if." The truth of the whole business is that Washington's much-boasted pitchng strength was not in evidence. Both games were lost primarily because airtight pitching was denied. Harper was mussed up badly in the morning encounter, and Boehling, who started the afternoon battle, was walloped just as hard, and in addition was

Poor pitching by Harper and Boehling caused the Griffmen to take the defensive early, and made uphill battles out of both games, the Red Sox having such generous handicaps that Washington simply could not pull them off their

The morning game really should have been won at that, because the Nationals hit the ball with a vengeance. In the afternoon, however, hits came narder, but with airtight boxwork Dutch Leonard could have been humbled.

MORNING GAME.

Boston, May 30.-It was a crime to lose Boston. May 30.—It was a crime to lose that morning game to the Red Sox 4 to as, and yet a close analysis of the box score shows that while the Griffmen outbatted their rivals they also tossed a whole lot of ragged baseball into one inning, bad pitching, errors and timely hits gave the bean easters four runs in the third frame, and four runs was enough to win the game.

In a determined effort to overtake the Sox, Clark Griffith used eighteen players including a pair of catchers, five pitchers and four pinch hitters.

Leonard and Boehling hooked up and task Southpaw Joe is usually effective as Sou

Sox. Cark or mith used that the second of catchers, five pitchers including a pair of catchers, five pitchers and four pinch hitters.

Twice the Nationals filled the bases head when the bases were loaded, put with nobody out and the only thing that could possibly have stopped them from went to work and was not much of an improvement over Boehling. Ayers pitchers with a three-base wallop over Moeller's ing crowd, according to was 4.998. In the after were a little better and the second of the second of when a club can score but three runs on fourteen hits there is a dark person hirking around the wood pile and perhaps the easiest explanation is one look at the column reserved for "left on bases." The Nationals had fifteen athletes left on the sacks. This tells the story.

The combat itself was a freak affair, it rained great guns during the fourth linning, driving the crowd to the sheltered attained stands, yet there was no cessation in play. The Red Sox collected five two baggers among their assortment of slams. Nearly every safe ball hit off Harper ween for a deviled for the sacks. This tells the sacks affair, in the second inning, when Boehling gathered up Leonard's grounder and slams when Janvrin sild into him and as he could not grasp a bat, the Old Fox

Inning. Up to the sixth, Leonard had allowed but one hit.

Moeller opened the sixth with a single to left, grow williams doubled to right, soring Moeller. Milans singled, putting Williams on third, Morgan fanned, but one hit.

Jim Shaw, Rice and Ayers looked the best of the big array of slab talent presented by the Old Fox. Shaw had a world of speed and it would not be at all surprising if the big fellow started a game soon, for he appears to be about ready.

Foster was the victim of an accident in the second inning, when Boehling gathered up Leonard's grounder and slams med to Eddie, at third base, who turned back Janvrin. Eddie's left hand was sprained when Janvrin sild into him and as he could not grasp a bat, the Old Fox

Rondeau's home is in Woonsocket, R. I. forty miles from Boston, and he was sent home tonight by Manager Griffith. There is grave danger according to the Boston club's physician, of a bloodclot forming on the brain, and until two or three days has elapsed, the extent of the injury will not be known.

The accident happened in the eighth inning of the morning game when Rondeau was ordered up to the plate to pinch hit for Jim Shaw. One of Ernie Shore's fast breaking curves landed squarely on the back of Rondeau's head, hitting him be-fore he could duck away. The French-man stood perfectly still after the ball landed and then started to sway back. Leonard and Boehling hooked up and wards and forward. The players rushed around him and prevented him from fall-ing. Rondeau was able to walk to the clubhouse but complained of severe pains and dizziness, so it was thought best to send him home for treatment. Griffith intended to play Rondeau in right field this afternoon as Leonard, a southpaw worked for the Red Sox.
